Competition for pole position at the start of the next economic cycle is fierce driving the need for CFOs to win the confidence of financial stakeholders, both investors and lending banks. The ability to do so is essentially based on their ability to pick up the right strategies and convince investors that they have the skills and track record to deliver. At the same time investors analyze and compare in detail the financial reporting they receive and are demanding more transparency.

During this briefing, we will present our approach on:

- ▶ Financial statement preparation in the CFO agenda
- ▶ What are the key features of a successful financial statement close process?
- ▶ Examples of financial statement close process documentation
- ▶ Automation as a process leverage
