“Emerging Partner of the Year Award”

Ernst & Young LLP (EY US) received the “Emerging Partner of the Year” award from Enablon at the Sustainability Performance Forum (SPF) at the Chicago Field Museum. This conference brought together over 600 environmental, health, safety and sustainability (EHS&S) professionals.

The event provided EY US with an excellent opportunity to showcase its EHS&S IT implementation services to current clients as well as potential clients in attendance.

Jeanna Doherty, EY Americas Climate Change and Sustainability Services (CCaSS) Leader, was on hand to accept the award on behalf of the firm and stated that, “Our relationship with Enablon is fundamental to EY’s growth in the EHS&S services sector. With significant advances in the quality and capability of software offerings for EHS&S management, many of our clients are looking to make significant investments that can streamline regulatory compliance, standardize data collection and reduce risk and cost.”

The award is the culmination of our efforts to forge a strategic alliance between EY and Enablon. Enablon is recognized as a leading developer of EHS&S management software solutions by third-party industry analysts such as Gartner, Forrester and Verdantix. In July of 2016, Enablon was acquired by Wolters Kluwer, a provider of information services for the health, tax and accounting, risk and compliance, finance and legal sectors with annual revenues of over $4.5b.

EY US has been working strategically on a go-to-market strategy with Enablon that includes the targeting of leading clients, high potential industry sectors and the development of intellectual property around EHS&S management. EY US is currently helping industry leaders in the automotive, hospitality and entertainment industries implement Enablon. While the long-term focus is penetration across all sectors, EY US is initially targeting growth in the Mining and Metals, Consumer Products and Retail, Automotive and Transportation and Hospitality sectors. One particular area of focus for Consumer Products and Retail is the development of a solution that will help clients in the food production and services’ industry comply with the US Food Safety Modernization Act, which places significant new food tracking and handling requirements on the industry.
