01

Current immigration landscape

Current immigration landscape

Pressure to reduce numbers of temporary foreign workers:

Goal to reduce population to 5% temporary residents by end of 2027. Currently at approximately 6.5%.

Impacted so far - Students, Low wage LMIAs, Post Graduate Work Permits, Open Spousal Work Permits, C10/C20 policy updates.

What other levers are there to reduce numbers?

IRCC staff layoffs and use of AI

Limited pathways to permanent residence

Budget and immigration levels plan

Overall reduction in Temporary and Permanent Resident numbers

- Main categories of reduction: students, overall IMP work permits, TFWP work permits
- Few categories with increases: PNPs

One-time Measures

- Pathway for 33,000 workers to transition to permanent residence
- Recruitment of 1,000 international researchers
- Accelerated pathway for H-1B visa holders

Areas of Investment

- Foreign Credential Assessment
- CBSA Enforcement

Impact to employers

- Increased scrutiny on various permit categories:
 - LMIA's
 - ICTS
 - C10 / C20 - February 2026 policy updates
 - Open spousal work permits
 - Temporary Residence Visa issuance
 - Vulnerable worker permits - February 6th, 2026 policy update
- Temporary Resident to Permanent Resident - NOC changes and related compliance implications
- What do these changes mean for employers?
 - Need to prepare more robust applications with more information/evidence
 - Need to be more careful around changes like promotions/increases and record retention
 - Pressure to support Permanent Residence applications
 - Monetary support, changing NOCs, increasing pay to meet prevailing wage, support PNPs

02

Shifting compliance landscape and trends

The shifting compliance landscape

Increased enforcement activity, shifting policy priorities, and tighter program controls are elevating compliance risk for employers—particularly those supporting foreign national workforces

What we're seeing now:

Heightened scrutiny of employer compliance obligations

Expanding inspections under the IMP and TFWP

Narrower eligibility and stricter interpretation of programs

Growing consequences tied to public listing, penalties, and work permit disruption

Is your immigration program aligned with today's enforcement reality—or yesterday's rules?

Shifting of the compliance landscape

What does this mean for compliance?

- Renewed emphasis on program integrity and on compliance
- Original intent of employer compliance regulations was not meant to be punitive - but to promote the respect of temporary foreign worker rights
- Increased focus on compliance as a way to reduce numbers of temporary foreign workers?
- Monetary penalties as a source of revenue to alleviate internal cost cuts?
- Conflict of interest: ESDC mandate to reduce numbers of temporary foreign workers while it is also responsible for conducting compliance inspections for employers accessing the program

Employer compliance key trends

- Reputational risk

03

The compliance mindset

Compliance mindset

- Compliance begins before the application is filed - Consider what details to include in the: LMIA advertisement, LMIA application, OOE
- Salary reviews/annual increases, Bonuses and other benefits, Vacations , Promotions
- Proactively establish and implement good policies and processes
- Be Inspection ready:
 - Document retention policies and processes,
 - Good file and document management,
 - Protect employee privacy
- Confirm whether inspection is for IMP or TFWP
- Documents to consider including in an Inspection response
- “Substantially the same - but not less favourable than”
- Foreign employers completing the OOE/LMIA

What can HR leaders do?

04

Risk factors and how to address them

Risk factors and how to address them

Reason to believe inspection triggered by employee filing Vulnerable Worker work permit

1

Not preparing sufficiently for an in-person inspection

2

Not having the right person attend the in-person interview

3

Not providing sufficient and relevant information in written responses

4

Answering questions not asked/volunteering information

5

Issues around HR policies/handling of complaints/whistleblower policies

6

Impact of other violations (Employment Standards, Workplace Health & Safety etc.)

7

Not giving compliance requirements sufficient consideration

8

Failure to audit immigration compliance issues as part of due diligence during corporate transactions

9

Layoffs and closures

10

Not providing the Know Your Rights link before the person starts work/failing to continuously provide access

11

Addressing non-compliance

- Voluntary disclosure
- Use of justifications
 - Change in a federal, provincial or territorial law
 - Change to a collective agreement
 - Changes in economic conditions impacting all employees equally
 - Error in interpretation made in good faith if the employer subsequently provided compensation
 - Unintentional accounting or administrative error if the employer subsequently provided compensation
 - Circumstances similar to the above
 - Force majeure/unforeseeable circumstances
- Litigation
