Chad suspends issuance of visas to nationals of the United States

Executive summary

The government of Chad recently suspended the issuance of visas to nationals of the United States in response to the US government's travel restrictions on Chadian nationals.

Key developments

The Chad government's reciprocal enforcement follows the US government's announcement in June 2025 of travel restrictions on nationals of 12 countries, including Chad. The suspension applies to business, tourist and transit visas and will remain in place until further notice.

Impact on employers

This development is expected to impact employers that send employees from the US to Chad for business purposes, and may result in delays in travel plans and project timelines.
