Challenges facing your organization

In today's dynamic business environment, organizations must navigate a rapidly shifting regulatory landscape, ongoing technological advancements and increasing complexity in global operations. These pressures demand not only adapting to frequent changes in tax laws and compliance requirements but also modernizing tax functions to support business growth and entry into new markets with complex jurisdictions. To stay ahead, it is critical that tax functions are strategic, efficient and equipped for tomorrow's challenges, which is why collaborating with experienced tax transformation professionals can provide the know-how and guidance needed to drive meaningful change and position your tax function for long-term success.

Questions for tax and finance executives to ask

- 1 Are our tax and finance functions strategically aligned with our broader business objectives?
- 2 Do we have the capabilities to keep pace with evolving tax regulations and compliance requirements?
- 3 Are our tax processes and data management practices optimized for accuracy, efficiency and transparency?
- 4 Is our tax function equipped with the right technology to enable digital transformation?
- 5 Do we have a roadmap for modernizing and adapting our tax operations for the future?

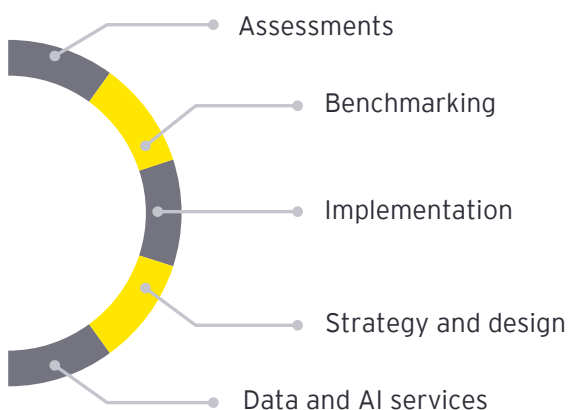

How companies are responding to tax and finance challenges
